

Infographic

How The CRA Loophole Could Save Taxpayers Billions

FEBRUARY 22, 2017

The American Action Forum (@AAF) released a new infographic detailing a loophole in the Congressional Review Act (CRA) which allows Congress to repeal regulations beyond the 60 legislative day limit. The loophole exists for those regulations in which Federal Agencies did not formally submit a report to Congress. According to AAF research, there are at least five regulations, which total $24 billion in regulatory costs, that could be affected by these loopholes in the CRA.

Click here to read the analysis.

THE CRA LOOPHOLE

WHAT IS IT?

A loophole that might allow Congress to repeal regulations dating back to the beginning of the Obama Administration

In order for a rule to "take effect"

A report must be submitted to Congress and to the Comptroller General

SOME RULES ARE STILL PENDING...

The five largest rules susceptible to the loophole have imposed costs of:

$24 BILLION

8.6 MILLION PAPERWORK HOURS

Should Congress use this error to bring Americans regulatory relief?

